CLASSICS IN BLACK AND WHITE: "ALFRED HITCHCOCK PRESENTS"

FEE: $60

For those who enjoy classic black-and-white television of the 1950s and '60s, it doesn't come any better than "Alfred Hitchcock Presents." This weekly suspense series, drolly hosted by the "Master of Suspense" himself, featured murder, obsession, and revenge, often on a humorous level, and with a twist at the end. Hitchcock directed some episodes, but also gave opportunities to Robert Altman, Sydney Pollack, William Friedkin, and other up-and-coming new directors. The program also featured many current and future Hollywood stars, from Peter Lorre and Vincent Price, to Peter Falk, Joanne Woodward, and Charles Bronson. Join Doug Deuchler of Chicago's Facets Multimedia Film School to screen and discuss The Glass Eye, Lamb to the Slaughter, Breakdown, and other episodes from this popular series.
